Introduction

This group of archives contains material created by the University of New Zealand. This is a collection of materials about the University and has come to the Archives from various sources. The collection is maintained for historical and reference purposes.

The University of New Zealand was established in 1870. It was the only degree-granting university in New Zealand until 1961. The University had a federal structure and a number of constituent institutions, namely the University of Otago, Canterbury University College, Auckland University College, Victoria University College, Canterbury Agricultural College and Massey Agricultural College.

The governance structure of the University of New Zealand consisted of the University Council and the Senate of the University.

In 1961 the University of New Zealand was dissolved and most of the constituent colleges became independent universities with degree-conferring powers. Massey Agricultural College associated itself with Victoria University of Wellington for a few years until it was granted independent university status.
